

Lindsey Albano
Professor Pennachio
Reflection #2

This class was a first time teaching experience for me. I was anxious to see the clients and get to know them. My first student was very shy and cold at first. The more I talked to him, the less he would say. We did the lesson on Microsoft Publisher. At first I thought he would have a hard time with this lesson because he seemed to be unfamiliar with the program. I tried to make the lesson as interesting as possible by relating the lesson to things he liked to do. We first made a flier about Nextel phones, because he had a Nextel. Then we made Halloween cards because it was Halloween the next day. This lesson made me realize how some students need to be reached out to, and given the extra push to make them succeed. I enjoyed teaching this client, and was looking forward to seeing him back the next week. The second client Agron and I taught. He was more outgoing, and was talking and making jokes with us. The lesson this time was Microsoft Excel. This client was more advanced than my first client, so it made the lesson more enjoyable. We had a lot of fun making the tables and graphs for this lesson. First we made a weekly spending chart, and he picked all of his favorite foods, clothing, and entertainment. On the second table we started to list different kinds of sneakers, and were going to make a yearly sales chart, but time flies when you're having fun, and we ran out of it! I truly enjoyed this experience, and I look forward to teaching in the future. These clients and lessons helped me to realize that teaching is what I really want to do.

Yes!!

Great!!